All Praise to Father Michael

IT IS BOTH a privilege and pleasure to pay tribute to the man who has built a lasting monument to himself and to the Catholic Church in the many fine buildings, the erection of which he has so ably designed and capably supervised during the quarter century just passed. The style, unobtrusive yet finished, lends itself admirably to this form of literature. The human element is emphasized, and many letters and documents impress the personality of Christian Reid clearly on the mind. It is a character that captivates and charms, and the biography has succeeded in an unusual degree in bringing to life the inner humanity of the woman, as well as the qualities of the woman.
