Some of several other newsmen, and organizations, as well as the gladiatorial association, have been made for the protection of victims by vigilantes, and in one case a group of vigilantes was formed to protect a man accused of murder. The group was later disbanded.

Andrew Jackson, Maj. Gen.,

The following letter from Gen. Banks, which is substantially from my recollection, was sent to me by the Department of State to the Senate on the 5th of October, was transmitted to the body by the president, on Monday morning.

To the Secretary of State,

Washington, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit a copy of a letter received by me, at your request, from the Governor of Georgia, in which he states that several persons have been killed and some wounded in the late disturbances.

The President of the United States,

Washington, December 2, 1837.