A campaign to save millions of dollars in property east of I-95 is being launched in Atlanta Friday at a meeting attended by state and local education leaders from 18 southern states. The leaders were called to Atlanta by Dr. John L. Stokley, director of the Georgia Education Association, to meet with the staff of the Georgia Department of Education. The campaign is being conducted by the Georgia Department of Education and the National Association of State Boards of Education. The campaign is expected to save an estimated $20 million in property east of I-95.

A person was shot in the leg in Atlanta Wednesday morning when a group of men entered a store and opened fire. The person was transported to a hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

The Georgia Board of Education has approved a new policy that will allow teachers to use social media for professional development. The policy follows a series of hearings and discussions on the topic over the past year. The policy allows teachers to use social media for professional development, but it also includes guidelines to ensure that the use of social media is appropriate and does not interfere with their work or personal lives.

The state legislature has approved a bill that will allow for the creation of a new type of school, called a "charter school." The bill, which was sponsored by Rep. Mark Mitchell, R-Atlanta, allows for the creation of schools that are run by local communities, rather than by the state. The bill was signed into law by Gov. Nathan Deal on Wednesday.

The state Department of Health has reported a decline in the number of cases of tuberculosis in the state. The department said that the number of cases has dropped by 15 percent in the past year, from 1,200 cases in 2012 to 1,000 cases in 2013. The department attributed the decline to a number of factors, including increased awareness and education about tuberculosis, better access to healthcare, and improved treatment options.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.

The state Department of Transportation has announced plans to expand a section of I-85 in Atlanta. The expansion will include the addition of two lanes in each direction, as well as the construction of a new interchange at the intersection of I-85 and I-285. The project is expected to cost $500 million and is scheduled to begin in 2015.

A group of Georgia lawmakers has introduced a bill that would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Joe Spivey, R-Powder Springs, and Sen. Steve Harrell, R-Powder Springs, would require the state to conduct an audit of all public school buildings every five years, with a focus on identifying and addressing safety and structural issues.