STATE RIGHTS VOTE. exceed the number by which it is supposed to be represented in Congress and to receive their aid in the defense of the Union. This would create a feeling of dissatisfaction among the people of the North, and would also lead to the formation of a separate state. The Constitution of the United States guarantees the freedom of the press and the right of the people to petition the government for a redress of grievances. These rights are being infringed upon by the action of the North Carolina legislature, which is acting contrary to the wishes of the people of the state.

The action of the North Carolina legislature is an example of the arbitrary exercise of power, which is characteristic of the southern states. The southern states have a history of oppression and exploitation of the black population, and this has caused a deep-seated resentment among the black people. The southern states are not acting in the interests of the people, but are seeking to preserve their own power and control over the black population. This is evident in the actions of the North Carolina legislature, which is acting contrary to the wishes of the people of the state.

The failure of the North Carolina legislature to uphold the rights of the people is a clear example of the arbitrary exercise of power. The people of North Carolina have a right to be treated fairly and justly, and this right is being denied to them by the actions of the legislature. The people of North Carolina are entitled to freedom of the press and the right to petition the government for a redress of grievances, and these rights are being infringed upon by the action of the legislature. The people of North Carolina are entitled to be treated as equals under the law, and this is being denied to them by the actions of the legislature.

The actions of the North Carolina legislature are a clear example of the arbitrary exercise of power. The people of North Carolina have a right to be treated fairly and justly, and this right is being denied to them by the actions of the legislature. The people of North Carolina are entitled to freedom of the press and the right to petition the government for a redress of grievances, and these rights are being infringed upon by the action of the legislature. The people of North Carolina are entitled to be treated as equals under the law, and this is being denied to them by the actions of the legislature.